

On February 1, 2003,
the debris of the Space Shuttle Columbia descended to Earth over Nacogdoches and the surrounding countryside of northeast Texas.
We were amid the process of planning for the future of our city.
The STS-107 crew were risking all they had to lead us into the future.

We are Forever United

This Comprehensive Plan for the City of Nacogdoches is dedicated to:
(left to right, front row first, in the photo above recovered from the debris)

Kalpana Chawla, Mission Specialist

Rick D. Husband, Mission Commander

Laurel B. Clark, Mission Specialist

Ilan Ramon, Payload Specialist (Israeli Space Agency)

David M. Brown, Mission Specialist

William C. McCool, Pilot

Michael P. Anderson, Payload Commander
